We are glad to note that one of the British trainers located here has taken up the training of horses in Buenos Aires and sends reports that have been good. He is English. Sporting blood. We take the following from the Sporting Times of April 10:

To the Editor,

Dear Sir,—

I think it is time someone from this country informed you that the letters late-ly received from the breeding "Sports in Buenos Ayres" are of a most interesting nature, &c, and signed "Comoro," and "C." (I) (Come no) (although containing some-thing) are on the whole both incorrect and entirely in fact the letters read like the hawdly of disorganized.

cause of the hatred which the natives of his country are said to have towards Englishmen, but because they were treated with the contempt they deserved.
 Trusting you will find a corner for this,
 remain, sincerely yours,
 Australian.

THE U.S.S. RICHMOND IN LA PLATA.
 (From our Special Correspondent.)

La Plata, April 26th, 1890.

My dear STANFORD,
 The U.S.S. Richmond of Captain A. V.
 Reed, occupies a convenient place in La Plata's great dock, distant four squares on where the tramway turns towards Cascaña village. You have only to cross the drawbridge, and five minutes' walk to renew acquaintance with their many friends there. The Admiral's regret that the Admiral was so considerable as to leave them so far away from the delightful society at that city. His taking with him in the Tallapoosa the Richmond's excellent band, on his latest excursion up river, prevents those agreeable afternoon "hops" being given in honor of the year's visit of the Richmond so memorably.

The Admiral and his dogs could well be "spared," says one who is fond of saying, "but not the band," and, doubtless, many lady friends of the officers will coincide in that well-expressed sentiment. It is said that the Richmond will not stay ten days longer in La Plata Port, and then return to Montevideo.

It is expected that the Tallapoosa, bearing the Gull's flag but not yet reached, will be the last of the fleet. The admiral, General Gifford, Montevideo.

reach her destination, and she must make a stay in our port.
